Patrice Wymore Turns Talents Towards New Art

A walk in the famous Borghese Gardens of Rome has made a sculptress out of lovely Patrice Wymore, so writes the actress to friends in the United States.

Pat, who co-stars with Randolph Scott in Technicolor outdoor drama "Man Behind the Gun," is in Rome with husband Errol Flynn.

"We live at the Excelsior Hotel, only two blocks from the Gardens," wrote Pat. "One day I walked through these lovely gardens and admired some of the ancient and exquisite sculpture on display there. Next I was asking myself if I couldn't at least try to start a piece of sculpture.

"Well, I did, and while I can't class it with the more immortal statues of the world, I'm so pleased that at least it looks a little like I intended it to."

The sculpture, it turned out, was a head of Errol Flynn. Pat plans to bring it back with her as a decorative piece for the Flynn's Hollywood home.

Cinema Chuckle

Lyona Hayden, pretty blond 18-year-old Canadian Girl signed by Warner Bros. to act as Anne Baxter's stand-in during the Quebec location filming of Alfred Hitchcock's "I Confess," is a conscientious young lady.

Invited by Miss Baxter to sit down, Lyona replied: "Oh, but I was engaged to be your stand-in. Is it all right for me to sit?"

A Voice of His Own

Danny Thomas does all of his own singing in "The Jazz Singer," in which he co-stars with Peggy Lee. Danny is famous as a comedian, but he also has a fine singing voice, which he uses to good advantage in the Technicolor musical.

Director Curtiz Gambles On Film Newcomers

Although he has been directing for some thirty years, each new picture to Michael Curtiz, one of the greatest box-office directors of all time, is exciting uncharted adventure.

The Hungarian-born director currently is enthusiastic about his latest assignment "The Jazz Singer," a Technicolor production starring Danny Thomas and Peggy Lee.

In the case of Peggy Lee, known heretofore only as a singer, Curtiz believes that he is on the verge of another dramatic discovery. Five years ago he took a chance on another comparative unknown and gave her a leading role in "Romance on the High Seas." The astounding success of Doris Day proved he was right.

It was Curtiz who saw in comedian Danny Thomas a straight dramatic actor and proved his point with "I'll See You in My Dreams."

More recently "The Story of Will Rogers," in which Curtiz took Will Rogers Jr., who had little acting experience and put him into a starring role opposite Jane Wyman, is another facet in the Curtiz legend.

A Feature Film First

Alfred Hitchcock received permission to film scenes of his production "I Confess" in the halls of Parliament Building in Quebec, Canada, marking the first time the Houses have been filmed for a feature picture. Montgomery Clift, Anne Baxter and Karl Malden star in the forthcoming suspense drama.

Peggy Lee Leaves Stones Unturned To Further Art

Some movie stars diet from time to time and others give up smoking periodically, but for her co-starring role with Danny Thomas in the new musical "The Jazz Singer," Peggy Lee gave up building rock gardens.

Peggy is perhaps Hollywood's most enthusiastic amateur architect and builder of rock gardens, but during the making of the picture the lovely blond songstress was asked to cease and desist from such activities.

The reason for the unusual ban was that Peggy wears strapless evening gowns in the Technicolor picture and sunburned shoulders pose a problem in Technicolor make-up.

"When it was brought to my attention, of course, I put down my rocks and tools," said Peggy. "But I'll be out there in the rock garden again as soon as I can. It's the greatest thing in the world for keeping you slim."

*      ★      *

Hitchcock Reveals Secret to Suspense

Director Alfred Hitchcock, a man well qualified to speak on the subject, says the secret of motion picture suspense is to keep audiences in a state of "pleasurable anxiety."

"Make the audiences suffer in their soft, comfortable seats as they see characters of the drama grope for solutions which they, the audiences, already know," added Hitchcock, whose latest suspense drama is "I Confess," starring Montgomery Clift, Anne Baxter and Karl Malden.

Doris Day Advises Would-Be Vocalists

If you want to be a singer, then just sing no matter how small the audience is, advises Doris Day, popular star who is currently at work in the Technicolor musical, "Calamity Jane." To paraphrase an old saying, it's a case of experiences makes perfect.

"Take any chance that comes along to be heard," Doris says, "no matter how slight it may be, just so you have an audience. A small audience's reaction to your efforts — even one by the gals and guys in your crowd — can give you that all-important lift."

Old Prop Newspapers Have Current Headline

Limey Plews, who has been the property-master on every picture directed by Michael Curtiz, hauled out for use in "The Jazz Singer," a bundle of prop newspapers which he's been using over and over for newsstand sets for almost twenty years. Regardless of the period, Plews has found the eight-column banner on the prop papers to be timeless. In 144-point Gothic it reads: COST OF LIVING RISING.

Scott Goes Freely Through House Doors

Randolph Scott, who stars in "Man Behind the Gun," lives in an unusual house. The doors are all extra-high to accommodate Scott's six feet three inch height.

"For years I'd been hitting my head on doorways," says Scott. "When I built this house I was determined I'd put an end to it, at least as far as my own house is concerned."

Sonny Roles

Bob Arthur, who played the son of Rosalind Russell in "Roughly Speaking" several years ago, is back on the Burbank lot to portray Frank Lovejoy's son in "The System."
